DID YOU KNOW?

The globe has 27 stars — one for each of Brazil's 26 states plus its capital district. They're arranged as the night sky looked over Rio de Janeiro on 15 November 1889.

One star sits above the white band and the rest below. That single star, called Spica, stands for the state of Pará in the north of the country.

The white band carries the words "Ordem e Progresso" — Portuguese for "Order and Progress".

Brazil is the largest country in South America and the fifth-largest in the world, and most of the Amazon rainforest is inside it.
